

Cultural ecology

Specialization in Ethnology field of study

Studies of the 2nd degree

It's an innovative educational offer for 1st degree studies graduates in different fields of study, who want to gain qualifications within cultural ecology.

This specialization brings closer complicated relationship between a human, culture and surrounding natural environment both in local and global understanding. The University is located in Silesia, which gives unique opportunities of observing dependency on the line between human and environment. The syllabus of the specialization includes workshop classes on the terrain of post-industrial Upper Silesia and the Silesian Beskid Mountains. Students will have an opportunity not only to gain theoretical knowledge (e.g. within e-learning courses), but also keep in touch with institutions, which operate in the field of enhancing natural environment and using its potential. Students will gain both knowledge and practical skills within creating friendly social-cultural ecosystems in the local environment and undertaking revitalisation activities. The aim of the studies is to obtain preparation for introducing good practice within cultural ecology.

The program of study corresponds with social and market need for people, who possess qualifications within cultural ecology.
